Providing driving licence and entitlement verification for company drivers and grey fleet

Employers have a duty of care to ensure employees who drive on company business, either in a company car or their own vehicle are correctly licensed and entitled to drive.

Licence information can be misrepresented, intentionally or unintentionally. Manual checking of licences is time consuming and unreliable, as without a reliable data source and the necessary expertise and insight, results can be difficult to evaluate. The result? Employers face an unacceptable risk and can fail in their duty.

Directors and business owners may not be aware that privately owned vehicles used for business journeys are treated exactly the same as company owned vehicles or professional drivers.

- Manual licence checks are inadequate and the information provided can be misinterpreted
- Manual licence checking is a time consuming process and without expertise and insight results are difficult to interpret
- Employers have a duty of care to ensure all drivers are correctly licensed and entitled to drive at all times

How do we help?

At AdvancedCheck, we combine a deep understanding of licence verification, with the knowledge of how to interpret and apply the results.

We combine the benefits of a fully managed service, with the commitment to resolve exceptions, to provide the certainty and peace of mind our clients demand.
